What is "binary privilege"? Wrong answers only.

Discussion and Debate

Lmao I had the joys of reading two different threads in two days of people who fail to understand that a subreddit for FTMs is gonna use words like man and guy and dude.

Both times they talked about binary privilege. I actually think they might be the same person but it's terrifying if they're not. Is this some new thing? Shit that's going around on TikTok? Has anyone else seen people talk about binary privilege? I hope to God this is not going to be the new thing tucutes bitch about.

The most recent perosn said, and I quote, "Privilege is when you feel comfortable."

As someone who is disadvantaged in nearly every category you can place me in, minus the fact that I don't live in an underdeveloped country (which I appreciate and am thankful for) I'm tired of people in general calling privilege on shit that isn't privilege. Makes fighting for actual equality so much harder. And what's crazy is that it's almost always the most privileged ones who screech and call everyone else that.

When the 1's are better than the 0's in binary code and so they have privilege Binary privilege is when you are either privileged or not privileged at all.

Schrödinger's privilege?

New_Construction_111 • 2y ago

It's the privilege of having reasonable expectations of how the society you live in works in regards of gender

Whoops, sorry, I mean it's the privilege of being disrespected by non binary identities

Damn it, I mean it's the privileges of being able to count up to 10 without missing any numbers.

Not gonna give an answer but I hate being called privileged too, and I'm cis. I have other disability's like ADHD that cause great difficulty in my everyday functioning, which is a disadvantage. I hate the oppression Olympics period. I stand with ya.

I hate this buzzword, just cause i own my own house and im white i have Gen Z idiots saying " oh your privaleged" or "must be nice to get handouts"" or you havent been oppressed, your white"

Like stfu, i had a fked up childhood, then ended up drunk and on drugs for 12 years, jails, rehabs, nearly died more times then i can count, then worked my ass off to turn my life around, get 7 years clean, get an education, support myself finacially in every aspect of my life, work 72 hour weeks on a shovel doing slave labour to save money, so stfu.

Ok rant over LOL

, i just fkin hate that word its a spit in the face to anyone whos ever made sacrifices and worked hard to get ahead in life.

Ugh. I saw that post too. It's hilarious that they say binary trans people have more privilege when they usually have to go through more surgery and medical transition to pass/be comfortable and often have worse dysphoria.

because society is so conditioned to believe that there are only 1s and 0s so when someone says theyre a 2 or 3 theyre automatically shunned and thought poorly of 🙄🙄

Binary privilege is not being terminally pretentious

One guy told me "because nonbinary people can never pass, and will always be seen as trans."

I mean, kinda? But I've also seen nonbinary people of whom's AGAB I had 0 clue what was, and could tell by looking at them that they were they/them. Sure, I doubt they were born intersex, but if I can't tell their agab... I think that's basically passing.

I saw this on another sub and I think it's pretty serious: The government travel page was just updated to exclude trans, queer, and intersex people.

If you ever want to feel dysphoric, read some of the posts on the other trans subs.
